UNDERSTANDING TODAY'S ECONOMY FOR TOMORROW'S STUDENTS

PHIL GARDNER

The world has changed; the global integration of the economy has changed labor requirements around the world. Today's and tomorrow's jobs can be best described as disposable. Even with a robust college labor market, we will not see the "good old days." This presentation will cover current forces shaping the economy and look ahead to further changes down the road, then will turn to what employer expectations will be in terms of skills and competencies of the new employees they will hire. Finally we will look at the good, bad and ugly aspects of the students that we see and soon will see in the classroom.
